Biography

Karen Mckoy is an award-winning international speaker who shares her wisdom with thousands of listeners on being resilient in the face of adversity in life and finding joy on the journey. A speaker who shares her struggles after the death of two children and a granddaughter. The speaker counsels' mothers about the personal journey to renew joy after the loss of a child. Upon earning a Bachelor of Science degree in Business Management with a concentration in Leadership, the speaker earned a Master of Arts in Religious Studies. With those formal degrees, the speaker has earned a doctorate in navigating through the tragic vicissitudes of motherhood as life is the best graduate school. As a Resilience Strategist, the speaker assists women in discovering God-given gifts through the tragedies suffered in life following the loss of a child and knowing there is still joy even after the inconsolable pain of death's heartbreak. Karen McKoy resides in Clayton Alabama, with her husband William, and six lovable Rottweilers, Lauren Ruth, Boaz, Lilly Rose Buster Rhymes SieAnna Grace and Brandy. The mother of seven children, two of which have their earthly home in their parents' hearts, as well as two bonus children. She loves reading good books and occasionally watching funny movies. The speaker desires mothers having lost children by tragic death to know there is life after the death of a child and to live those following years as much as is The Will of The Almighty, by humbling to His purpose only.
